AN UNFORTUNATE PRINCESS.

On a certain March evening in the year of 1751, Frederick Prince of Wales, son of George the Second and father of George the Third, died at his house in Leicester-fields, in the arms of Desnoyers, a French dancing-master who had been called in to soothe the last tremendous moments of the royal spendthrift with the twang of his favorite violin. On the 13th of June following, his widow gave birth to a baby princess, known to history as Caroline Matilda, the beautiful, imprudent, and unfortunate Queen of Denmark, about whose guilt or innocence there has been almost as much controversy as about that of Mary Stuart, and with as little likelihood of ever coming to a distinct and certain conclusion. The Princess of Wales was a stern mannered, though in reality a loving and careful mother; still so stern that once, when the little Duke of Gloucester was sitting deep in melancholy thought, and she asked him sharply what he was thinking of, he was able to answer, "I was thinking that if ever I have a son I will not make him as unhappy as you make me."

Caroline Matilda, it is to be supposed, bore her share with the rest; but we hear nothing of her life until the fatal year arrived when, at the age of fifteen, she found herself betrothed, and then the wife, of a fair-haired, under-sized, gay-tempered, handsome, dissolute young scamp of seventeen, Christian the Seventh, King of Denmark. "Diminutive as if he came out of a kernel in the fairy tales," with, added Walpole, in another place, "the sublime strut of his grandfather (or a cock sparrow)."

The young queen was in her girlhood; fair almost to a marvel, with light flaxen hair, shining like silver and of luxuriant growth, large, clear, bright, blue eyes, full red lips—the under one rich and pouting—small teeth, white and even, and of a temper as bright and sweet as her face: lovely and fascinating enough surely to have made her lover for life the young prodigal who kissed her publicly at Roskilde when they met—perhaps moved for the moment by the sight of her girlish beauty—but who soon taught her what infinite power of subdivision the instinct which it pleased his royal majesty to call love, was capable. For the marriage feast was scarcely cold, when Christian found "Milady," or "Katherine of the Pretty Feet"—about whose life the less said the better—a companion more congenial to his taste than the young English princess, whose soul was as pure as her face was fair. And not only "Milady," but all the rosy and demure to be met with in Copenhagen, to the scandal of decent people and destruction of public morals.

Caroline Matilda found her Danish crown more thickly set with thorns than roses. Young as she was, and so sadly needing careful guidance, she had not a friend in her new home to direct or uphold her. Juliana Maria, the king's stepmother, had always been his declared enemy (even so, Christian believed, to his attempted destruction), because of her own son Frederick, who would come to the throne, could the crown prince, as he was then, be destroyed; so that she was the poor young queen's enemy too, ex officio if not by personal dislike, and laid snares and dug pits for her whenever and wherever she could; the old grandmother, Sophia Magdalena, was kind enough, but even she cared more for power than for the right, and had spent her life in trying to keep her personal influence paramount in Danish politics; and the Princess Charlotte Amelia, the king's aunt—who seems to have been about the best of the set—lived only for religious practices and charities, keeping as far out of the reach of her royal nephew as she could, having been his favorite butt and the object of his rudest practical jokes time out of mind.

The final cause of her withdrawal from the palace was "a fright she received through the king's first page crawling into the dining-room on all fours, disguised as a savage."

So Caroline Matilda was absolutely unfriended, save by the Grand Mistress of her household, Frau von Plessen; and she, though a virtuous woman, and so far desirable in a court where even common propriety was at a discount, was a harsh-tempered domineering old-maidish kind of person, who made bad worse, by injudicious advice, and by never being able to understand that sometimes it is better to drive with a slack rein and a silken lash than with tight ropes and a leather thong. Influenced by this clever lady, Caroline Matilda put on an air of forbidding coldness to her husband (perhaps it was not much trouble to do that), with the idea so common among women, and so mistaken, that the best way to secure a husband's vagrant affections is to deny or conceal their own. In this case, however, it was not so much concealment as confession, for the young queen had no great fondness for her royal spouse; as, indeed, how could she have? Unless neglect, debauchery and open infidelity were qualities calculated to win the love and esteem of a girl-wife virtuously educated. Nevertheless, she nursed him assiduously when he had the scarlet fever; and when he recovered, he went back to his street-rows, his mistresses, his low pot-house riots, his assaults on the watch, and all the other disgraceful doings which made him the disgust and the talk of Europe.

The royal favorite in chief at this time was Count Conrad von Holck, lately appointed Court Marshal, but acting as a kind of private M.C. to the monarch, arranging all the court balls and fetes; also helping him in pleasures less innocent. He it was who accompanied Christian to and from Milady's house, "during which street riots were but too frequent;" who shared in all his vices, and who organized many a nocturnal orgie during the brilliant luncheons which he was in the habit of giving at Blaagaard, a kind of castellated pleasure-house, just outside the north gate. And even when the queen gave birth to a son, the future Frederick the Sixth, and all Denmark went mad with joy; always excepting the queen dowager, Juliana Maria, whose son was thus doubly barred; even then, Christian and his favorite continued their excesses, and made the whole town ring with the echo of their misdeeds. Christian was seen one day in broad daylight returning from "Milady's" in a state of intoxication, the people pursuing him with hootings and insults to his own palace-gates; in a word, the private and public annals of king, court and favorite, were of the worst kind. At last, however, the ministers arrested Katherine of the Pretty Feet, and put her in prison, after her royal lover had bought her an hotel and created her a baroness.

And now Christian and his court set out on their travels; taking with them, as surgeon and physician in ordinary, John Frederick Struensee, hitherto physician of Altona, and of the lordship of Pinneberg. And first the King of Denmark came here to visit the King of England. But "Farmer George" was not especially eager to favor his brother-in-law; so little eager, indeed, that when Christian came to Dover, he found no royal carriages waiting for him, and had to come to town in hackney carriages. Even when he got to town, "by another mistake," says Walpole, "King George happened to go to Richmond about an hour before King Christian arrived in London. An hour is exceedingly long, and the distance to Richmond still longer; so with all the dispatch which could possibly be made, King George did not get to his capital till next day at noon. Then, as the road from his closet in St. James's to the King of Denmark's apartments on the other side of the palace is about thirty miles (which posterity, having no conception of the prodigious extent and magnificence of St. James's, will never believe), it was half an hour after three before his Danish majesty's cousin could go and return to let him know that his good brother and ally was leaving the palace (in which they both were) to receive him at the queen's palace, which you know is about a million of snails' paces from St. James's. Notwithstanding these difficulties and unavoidable delays, Woden, Thor, Frigga, and all the gods that watch over the kings of the north, did bring these two invincible monarchs to each other's embraces, about half an hour after four o'clock on the same evening."

Christian's life in London was bad enough; but it was even worse in Paris, and the queen was carefully informed of all that would most pain and disquiet her, it being the policy of that nest of intrigues, of which Juliana Maria was the chief, to keep the young couple as far sundered in both life and love as was possible. It was not to be wondered at if she was cold and disdainful and full of wrath and bitterness, when her scampish husband came home after his seven months' tour, and if she resented Count Holck's familiarities and impertinences, and even added the new physician, Struensee, to her black list, as one of the tribe of her enemies. She soon learnt a different lesson, poor girl! Well for her if she had never come so.

But indeed Struensee's policy was at the first quite puzzling enough to mislead her. He wished to reconcile king and queen, he said, and yet he enticed Frau von Gabel into a web of circumstances, compromising in appearance and fatal in the end. This Frau von Gabel was a high-minded noble hearted woman, almost a republican in her political creed and therefore unable to live at court, but, whether royalist or republican, patriot before all. The king had made certain advances to her in times gone by, which it is scarcely necessary to say were repulsed; but now Struensee took up the dropped loop, and, assuring Frau von Gabel that the king was in every way reformed, and that he did really need her ennobling influence to keep him in the right way, urged her to admit his visits again—she, the Egria, to his Numa. Frau von Gabel consented; but soon found that all this talk of Christian's great improvement was mere moonshine; he was as bad as ever, and a little more mad; and the character of Egria was soon sought to be brought down to a lower level and to baser purposes. When she found this, out and deception was no longer possible, the poor lady died of grief; and the strange intrigue about which no satisfactory theory as to why it was, and to what use, came to an end. She died, hating Struensee; whom the queen hated too, for her share in the plot.

At that time, then, there was no love between the doctor and the queen; but soon after this, the crown prince (her little baby) had the small-pox, and old enemies were forgotten in the new conditions of help and trust this set up between them. Ever after this illness Caroline Matilda admitted Struensee into her intimate friendship; and so began the drama which ended in a cruel and a bloody tragedy. She was imprudent to an almost insane extent; she drove out alone with the handsome young doctor, walked with him alone, rode with him alone; at the court ball she danced chiefly with him, and suffered him to address her in a tone of temper and command, to say the least of it, astounding. These follies, and more to the back of them, got the young queen much ill will, and caused many a biting comparison to be instituted between her and Mary Stuart, with Struensee for Rizzio. Together with her character, whether rightfully or wrongfully, the queen began to lose something of her sweet English modesty, and to play unwomanly pranks in public quite as damaging as vices. She hunted daily, striding her horse in man fashion, and dressed as a man in "a dove-colored beaver hat with a deep gold band and tassels, a long scarlet coat faced with gold all round, a buff gold-laced waistcoat, frilled shirt, mau's neckerchief, and buckskin small-clothes and spurs." She looked splendidly when mounted and dashing through the woods, but when she dismounted the charm was to a great degree dispelled, for she appeared shorter than she really was; the shape of her knees betrayed her sex, and her belt seemed to cut her in two." At other times, when dressed like a woman, she was one of the most beautiful women of her time.

Struensee's political power was as great as his personal influence. The whole power of the state seemed to be vested in him; the queen being his tool, the king his victim, and the country his mere footstool whereby he might mount to supreme honor. All Europe began to talk. Then the talk got so loud that the Princess of Wales, Caroline Matilda's mother, made a long and toilsome journey northward, which, whatever the political motives assigned, seemed to have for its motive simply to see her daughter, and to remonstrate with her on her folly. Not that she herself came into court with clean hands; for the position of Lord Bute in her royal household had long been a favorite subject for scandal and satire. The meeting took place after some delay, and the mother's resolute removal of certain obstacles thrown in the way by Caroline Matilda; but no good was done. The king and queen came attended only by Struensee and Wamstedt, the favorite page, who were seated in the carriage with them; and when the Princess of Wales spoke to her daughter in English, she pretended not to understand her—she had forgotten the language! In fact, she showed herself as wayward and unmanageable as a naughty child who cannot be reasoned with and who will not be controlled. Letters and envoys from both mother and brother (George III.), were received in the same manner; and thus the last drags sought to be put upon the downward course were knocked aside, and the royal lady's reputation went on towards destruction.

What was it which, at about this time, made her write with a diamond on the window pane at Frederiksberg, "Oh keep me innocent, make others great." Conscience? Sorrow for past, or fear of future sins? Or was it simply dissimulation; and the endeavor to deceive eyes whose sharpness of vision was, she well knew, spying out her weak places and gauging her misdoings? For we cannot for a moment accept Sir Lascelles Wraxall's theory, and account her innocent in her relations with Struensee. [Life and Times of Her Majesty Caroline Matilda, Queen of Denmark and Norway, by Sir C. F. Lascelles Wraxall, Bart.] Every incident related and every induction to be drawn, point to one thing; and whatever the political basis, whatever the greater worth of the Dano-Germanic alliance against that of the Russian, and the zeal of the physician-minister for his own ideal and his own views of state-craft, the question between the man and woman remains the same for both and all concerned. Unhappily for the half-mad, half-bad king, who, when Struensee dismissed honest old Bernstorff, had not a friend left. Given up to Struensee and the queen, he was now simply a puppet and a prisoner, with two black children—a boy and a girl—for his only companions, and Envoel, Brandt, whom he hated, for his valet, chamberlain, pedagogue, and master—Enevold Brandt, whom Holck had exiled and Struensee restored. In truth, Christian's condition was pitiable enough. Grant that he was mad; still the manner of life to which his wife and the minister doomed him was infamous. No one paid him the smallest respect, and once an impudent page even drove him into a corner, saying, "Mad Rex, make me a groom of the chamber." He was compelled to make personal appointments of men specially distasteful to him; and on one occasion, in revenge for having been made to sign an appointment as chamberlain for a man he hated, he made one of his stove-heaters a chamberlain; again, another time, he gave out that his dog Gourmand was a "Conference Councillor," and proposed his health, which the rest were obliged to acknowledge as de rigueur. This was to express his disgust at certain fault-finding and scolding which he had to submit to in council, showing that, as barking was the rule of the day there, Gourmand could bark as well as any of them, and so was quite as efficient a conference councillor. His chief amusement was smashing china and beheading the garden statues; in which odd play Moranti, his black boy, assisted him. For a change, he would roll on the ground with the boy, biting and scratching him, or would fling papers, furniture, books, glass, ornaments, anything he could find, over the balcony down into the court-yard; once wishing to fling the boy and dog Gourmand after the rest. In public he was treated with contempt by his keeper, Brandt, who in private bit and beat him—he said by the king's own desire; and, indeed, the whole treatment of this unhappy wretch, during the reign of Struensee, was as damaging to the queen's reputation as it was disgraceful and degrading.

The queen, influenced by Struensee, who, however, was loyally well intentioned in this, brought up her son on the wildest principles of "hardening"—a kill or cure system indeed for a delicate child. His food was of the simplest and poorest kind, and what we should call inutritious, and always cold; he had a cold bath twice or thrice a day; he was kept in a cold room without a fire, dressed lightly in thin silk, and went about barefoot, although he was a delicate baby of not quite three years old. His playmate and companion was a little fellow of his own age, called "Little Karl," the natural son of a surgeon, who was allowed to fight with him and master him if he could, no one being suffered to assist or prevent. The queen was so severe with him, that when the attendants wanted to frighten him into good behavior, they used to threaten to take him to his mother, which generally succeeded. Struensee's coadjutor, the physician Berger, got a few of the more extreme rules relaxed; and, owing to his representations, this royal baby was allowed to wear shoes and stockings, to be rather more warmly clad, to have his rice boiled in broth instead of water, to have meat soup for dinner twice a week, and to have his room slightly warmed in the morning.

And now popular feeling began to take a very different tone, and the ministry knew that the evil hour which has to come to all misdoers, was drawing near. The queen and the favorite dared not show themselves in public; the guards were doubled at the palace, and various unusual precautions were taken; the most abominable satires and caricatures were printed and circulated, or stuck or scrawled on the walls; half in jest and half in earnest; the queen and the ministers would speculate on their future lives, and what they should do when the crash came and they were forced to fly—they foresaw nothing worse; and all this while the indignation of the people and the anger of the European courts became louder and deeper, and of more ominous intensity and fierceness. Anonymous letters were sent to Brandt, advising him to put himself out of danger by ranging himself on the king's side, and against the minister; and he and Struensee had misunderstandings, even to the extent of the former proposing a kind of coup d'etat to Falckenskjoeld, one of the government, beginning and ending in the arrest of Struensee, and the transfer of the queen to himself; and then the great plot was arranged, headed by Juliana Maria and Prince Frederick her son, the king's half-brother.

The favorite's treatment of this young man had been most impolitic, insulted, neglected, irritated, his rank and near relationship with the king ignored or remembered only to fix a deeper sting, no wonder that he put himself at the head of a party determined to rid the country of a group of adventures who had lost their heads when they had gained the top round of the ladder, and whose so-called reforms were neither popular nor understood, besides being nullified by the poison of the scandals attached to them. When a forged document was shown to Juliana Maria (at least, Sir Lascelles Wraxall says it was forged), wherein it was set forth how that the king was to be forced to abdicate, and how that the queen was to be declared regent with Struensee as protector—meaning, as it was argued to her, that the king and crown prince were to be murdered, Struensee married to the queen, and his children by her set on the throne—she felt that no time was to be lost, and that either she and hers must fall, or they. Means were not wanting, nor agents, nor adherents; they never are wanting when a tumult is contemplated, and good pickings are to be had out of a ruined palace; and the right time came with the rest. After a certain masked ball, where the queen had been most remarkably gay and most strikingly beautiful, and where, by the strange falling to pieces of a certain supper, all things were marvellously facilitated, the plot came to its culmination. The ex-queen, her son, and some others (Guldberg, Rantzen, Eickstedt, Koller, and the ex-valet Jensen), entered the king's bedroom at dead of night, where they first nearly frightened him to death, and then got him to sign orders for the arrest of Struensee, Brandt, Falckenskjoeld, the queen, and others of minor moment. One by one those named were arrested and secured; and so was broken up in a few moments the coalition which had changed the whole face of Danish politics and the whole current of Danish society, for two years.

Struensee, never a brave man, though so daring in political action, first fainted, then took to swearing horribly, and then gave way to abject despair. Brandt was philosophical, and even gay. Falckenskjoeld was calm and critical. But the poor young queen was impassioned and terrified, full of wrath and fear and desperation and anguish: now struggling with the soldiers whom Rantzen had with him to secure her; now trying to hurl herself from the open window shrieking wildly for Struensee and the king; finally borne away to the fortress of Kronborg, ruined and disgraced for ever. Young, lovely, with a good and noble nature that had been at first outraged and afterwards misguided, we cannot but pity her. Truly she had sinned in her degree; but she had been sinned against more grievously, and her wrong-doing had been retaliation rather than aggression. For, as was said before, we cannot accept Sir Lascelles Wraxall's theory of her innocence, though her failings may be tenderly excused for the sake of the evils she had undergone.

The end room came. Struensee, pressed and threatened, confessed to his liaison with the queen, circumstantially detailed; and when the queen was shown his confession, and told that if she denied it he would be tortured, she signed it in attestation of its truth, and so signed away her good fame for ever. He was executed, with certain barbarous circumstances disgraceful to the time and people—having first seen his colleague Brandt decapitated and disembowelled before his face; Falckenskjoeld was sentenced to be confined on the rock of Munkholm for life. Caroline Matilda was removed from Kronborg to the castle of Aalborg, where she was kept a prisoner until released at the instance of England. Thence, she went to Celler, or Zell, the old residence of the former Dukes of Lauenburg, where she lived happily enough, much beloved by all who knew her, and cheered by the frequent presence of her sister, the Princess of Brunswick. Her only grief was the loss of her children, especially of the little girl—whose legitimacy, by-the-by, came under grave suspicion; but the king had formally acknowledged her at her birth. Here she saw Mr. Wraxall, the grandfather of her present apologist, then a young man, "just her own age," and who seems to have been greatly struck by her beauty, and interested in her fortunes. He describes her as very beautiful, though too fat; like her brother George the Third in feature, but harmonized and softened; charitable, gay, sweet-tempered and discreet—all that the wronged Princess should be.

Mr. Wraxall entered into the plot for her release, which had its object, the arrest of Juliana Maria and Prince Frederick, and the king's published order for her return to Copenhagen. It is impossible to guess what new historic complications might have arisen had she not, in the midst of this under-current, died on the 11th of May, 1775, wanting less than three months of her twenty-fourth year. Of course people said she died of poison, that wide and convenient vagueness; but in truth it was of scarlet fever, taking a typhoid character, and easy to be accounted for. One of her young pages had just died of this disease, and she, very foolishly, went into the room where the coffin was, and looked at the dead body. The sight haunted her, and the disease found her out, carrying her off in a very few days. When dying, she wrote to George the Third, solemnly protesting her innocence of all with which she had been charged; and also to M. Roques, the pastor of the French Protestant church at Zell, she said the same: "I was never faithless to my husband." So, at least, it is reported. Whether Sir Lascelles Wraxall's chivalrous theory respecting the unhappy princess be correct or not, the memoir has high merits, not only as an historical, but as a literary production. Some of the details of court life are extremely curious.

VIENNA.—We copy an account of Mannheimer's funeral (March 20), from the A. Z. d. I. A correspondent writes: "The funeral took place at nine o'clock this morning, amidst the concourse of people, all evincing their profound sympathy. The synagogue, literally crammed with people, was lighted up with thousands of candles. In order to prevent an interruption of the funeral ceremonies by the multitude that poured in, the doors of the synagogue were closed. Before the ark, draped in black, stood the coffin containing the body of the deceased, on a scaffolding likewise covered with black cloth. Around it burned wax tapers in black candelabra. Round the coffin stood the mourners, sons of the departed; further, the wardens of the congregation, several members of the council of the empire, the municipality, and the rabbis and preachers of Pesth, Brunn, and Presburg. At the upper end of the coffin stood the oldest warden of the community, Joseph Wertheimer the rabbi of Vienna, Horwitz, Professor Sulzer and Dr. Jellinek. The latter opened the proceedings with intoning a chorale, in which the choral association 'Concord' participated. Herr Joseph Wertheimer then delivered a most pathetic funeral speech. He was followed by Dr. Jellinek in a deeply affecting oration. A discourse was then delivered by Rabbi Horwitz in Hebrew. Another brought this portion of the ceremony to a close. The coffin was then carried by the wardens to the hearse, which was drawn by four horses, and the funeral procession set itself in motion in the following order: First came four gens d'armes on horseback; then followed the various benevolent associations whose president the deceased was; among these was also a deputation from a Christian association, to which he had been a benefactor; then came the union 'Concord,' carrying lighted torches; then the wardens and the synagogue committee; next the hearse, on both sides of which walked the eldest wardens carrying torches. The hearse was followed by the mourners, several high ecclesiastics and dignitaries, as well as about 10,000 individuals. The streets through which the procession passed were thronged with people, so were also all windows. The procession only arrived at 11 o'clock, at the burial ground. This could not hold the immense multitude, which had to stand outside. At the grave some more funeral orations were delivered, and the coffin was lowered into it amidst the chanting of a most affecting chorale."

BURIED ALIVE.—A strange event has just occurred at a village near Saumur, (Maine-et-Loire), France. An old man named Grangereau, was interred some days back without any certificate of his disease having been given by a physician, as required by law. After the funeral services had been read, the sexton began to fill up the grave, but was startled by hearing a rattling noise, which he thought proceeded from the coffin. He listened attentively and was convinced that his ears had not deceived him; a woman who was praying at a grave close by also heard the noise. The sexton ran to inform the mayor and the cure, but the former was absent, and the latter merely referred him to the family of the deceased. "Nothing was, however, done to ascertain whether the poor man was really alive or not, and the grave was filled up. Rumors soon got abroad that Grangereau had been buried alive, and when they came to the knowledge of the Procureur Imperial of Saumur, he instantly proceeded to the village to institute an inquiry, the result of which is not yet known.

A NEW TENOR.—The young English tenor, Mr. Tom Hohner, has been singing with immense success at Milan. The newspapers of that operatic city speak of his performance in the "Puritani" in terms of rapturous praise which to our colder sense appears somewhat excessive. His voice is described as rich, pure, flexible, and sympathetic, and especially adapted to Rossinian music, and his method and style are equally commended. One journal promises him a career which will eclipse the success of his most brilliant predecessors and contemporaries.

A WEEPING STATUE.—The Pungolo, of Milan published an explanation of the miracle of the statue of the Magdalen which stands in one of the most populous suburbs of that city, and which was in the habit of weeping, from time to time, on account of the impieties of the day. The authorities having caused the statue, formed of baked clay, to be examined, discovered in its interior a reservoir for water, intended to be heated. Whenever the clergy wished to make the Magdalen weep, they had a fire lighted beneath the reservoir, which caused the hot water to evaporate, and rise into the upper parts, of the statue, and the steam there being condensed, was directed towards the eyes by means of pipes.

It is stated in the Sunderland Herald that the toad lately found by some quarrymen at Hartlepool, and announced to be 6000 years old, is not a myth. The Rev. Robert Taylor, of St. Hilda's Parsonage, states that the toad is still alive, that it has no mouth, that it was found in the centre of a block of magnesian limestone 25 feet below the surface of the earth, and that it differs in many respects from all ordinary toads.

The receipts of the French opera were never greater than they have been during the representation of "L'Africaine." At the two last representations they amounted to 11,800 and 11,900 francs respectively.

MEXICAN LOAN.—Bonds for this loan are offered at the rate of 50 cents on the dollar, gold coin. They are redeemable on their face value in United States coin, and accordingly offer a good opportunity for speculation. Mr. Samuel Brannan is the agent on behalf of the Liberal Government, and of him all information can be obtained.

THE AMAZONIAN NATURALIST.

This does not mean the fly catching of one of those hybrid beings, neither man nor woman, whom it is the custom to call amazons, but the adventures of Mr. Walter Henry Bates on the borders of the river Amazon, where he lived for nine years, hunting for all manner of creatures, "with a view towards solving the problem of the origin of species" as his final and philosophic aim; but with what is more to our purpose, the practical result of a very charming book, full of pleasant details relating to the "eight thousand species new to science," which he introduced to the European world among the fourteen thousand-seven hundred and twelve that made the sum of his discoveries.

Amongst the most curious of the many curious facts which Mr. Bates has recorded, is that of the bird-catching spider, Mygalis avicularia, so long held to be only a figment of Madame Merian's own brain; and to have been attested by M. Palisot de Beauvais, rather from compliance than from truth; but the existence of which is now established without doubt, Mr. Bates having seen with his own eyes what he has related. He saw a large hairy spider, nearly two inches in length of body but with legs expanded to the length of seven inches, and both body and legs covered with coarse grey and reddish hairs; he saw this monster crouched on the body of a finch about the size of an English siskin, which, smeared with a filthy liquor, but not quite dead, still palpitated beneath the fangs of the horrid brute. Another finch lay on the bole dead; and the dense white web stretched across a crevice in the tree, but broken now and the birds entangled in the pieces, told the whole story of the capture. The mygalas are called crab-spiders by the natives, and if touched shed their hairs, causing a peculiar and almost maddening irritation. They are sometimes of immense size, and Mr. Bates saw one of them with a cord round its waist, led about the house by some Indian children, as if it were a dog. Many of the spiders of the country are of exquisite colors, and some, which double themselves up at the base of the leaf-stalks, deceive their prey by thus looking like flower-buds. One, a species of Acrosoma, has two curved bronze-colored spines, an inch and a half in length, proceeding from the tip of its abdomen; it spins a large web, its spines, so far as can be seen, neither hindering nor helping in the work. As for the webs, some are like silk, and some like fine muslin; and some of the dens are broad slanting galleries two feet long, burrowed in the ground, others are nests built in trees, or hammocks slung across the angles of a room, or hung up on the tiles and thatch of the house-tops.

Then there are ants; specially the Sauba ant; that big-headed creature which thatches its entrance-domes with leaves, thereby causing most unsightly devastation to the best of the cultivated trees. For the cunning little thief will not touch a rough and ready forest tree of its own country (sometimes indeed, it will condescend to a very young and tender native), but, in general attacks only the imported and cultivated trees, as the coffee and orange trees. It was wrong, though, to call the whole family of the Sauba ant big-headed; it is only the warriors which have those enormously swollen and massive heads—highly polished, like a bit of Egyptian granite or obsidian, in the Worker-major, but opaque and hairy in the subterranean worker; while the real worker, the Worker-minor, who carries the leaves, and feeds the young, and cleans the cells, and in fact does all the useful domestic economy of the nation, is an ordinary ant like any other, varying in size among themselves, but never hydrocephalic like the two before spoken of. Very extensive are the underground ramifications of this Sauba ant. An enterprising French gardener tried to clear them out of the Botanic Gardens at Paris by blowing sulphur into their galleries; and Mr. Bates says he saw the smoke issue at the outlet seventy yards distant from the place where the bellows were used. The Sauba ant not only clips the leaves off the trees in the free forest, but also acts burglar on its own account, and comes into the house, where it will carry off, grain by grain, any amount of the farinha, or mandioca meal, which makes the bread of the locality. One night, Mr. Bates was awakened by his servant calling out to him that the rats were at his farinha baskets. He got up and listened; but the noise was not that of rats; and he went into the store-room, he found truly almost a more formidable enemy; for there he confronted a broad column of Sauba ants, each laden with a grain, passing between the door and his precious farinha baskets, the whole contents of which (about two bushels) they would have carried off in that one night had they not been disturbed. Conquered they were not, though killed by thousands; for ever a fresh phalanx walked in to supply their dead comrades' places, and it was only after repeated blowings up by gunpowder—repeated so often that at last the hard heads learnt the lesson and got afraid—that Mr. Bates and his farinha baskets were left in peace. We do not hear how the natives protect themselves against the Sauba ant, but to smear with copahu balsam everything which they would have to traverse—as cords by which food-baskets are suspended, the legs of chairs and footstools, hammock-ropes, etc.—is the only means of warding off the attacks of another ant pest, the fire-ant, or formiga de fogo, which is the scourge of Tapajós river—one of the branch rivers of the Amazonas.

Another kind is the Eciton, of which let the pedestrian beware; for, should he disregard the twittering and restless fitting hither and thither of plain-colored birds (ant-thrushes), in a very few steps he will come to grief, and fall into the midst of the ant-army. They will swarm up his legs with inconceivable rapidity, each one driving its pincers-like jaws into his skin, and with the purchase thus obtained, doubling in its tail and stinging with all its might. His only chance then is to run for it—as the natives have done, shouting "Tanoca!" and scampering to the other end of the column—and when safe there he must pick off his ants one by one, more often than not leaving their heads and jaws sticking in his flesh. When the Ecitons are out, the animal and insect worlds are in commotion and dismay. Spiders, caterpillars, maggots, larvae of all kinds, fall an easy prey to the devouring multitudes; a wasp's nest is riddled with supreme indifference to the stings of the owners, and the larvæ and pupæ apportioned fairly, according to the relative size of the spoil and the spoiler—the larger bits to the large Ecitons, and the smaller bits to the small; and then away they march back to their own home through the entangled tickets, where no one can follow them.

Once, at Villa Nova, Mr. Bates thought he had come upon a migratory horde of this ant; but it was only a foraging party after all, returning home with their spoil—the grubs of another species. It was a dense column of from sixty to seventy yards long, and yet neither van nor rear was visible; all were moving in the same direction save a few isolated individuals on the outside of the column running rearward for a short distance, then wheeling about and trotting on with the main body. These rearward movements were going on everywhere, and seemed to be a way of communicating a common understanding to the army; for the retrograding ants stopped often, to touch some onward-moving comrade with their antennæ, by which they doubtless gave him the password or signal, or told him the way he was to go. The large-headed fellows of the tribe are singularly conspicuous in these columns. They are as one to about a score of the smaller class: "none of them carried anything in their mouths, but all trotted along empty-handed and outside the column, at pretty regular intervals from each other, like subaltern officers in a marching regiment of soldiers. It was easy to be tolerably exact in this observation, for their shining white heads made them very conspicuous amongst the rest, bobbing up and down as the column passed over the inequalities of the road." They went along quite quietly, not noticing their companions; and when the column was wantonly disturbed they did not show fight or prance forth as eagerly as the others did. What is their specific use to their community, Mr. Bates cannot quite determine. He throws out a suggestion that it may be that of indignation to the ant-thrushes which follow the marching columns and are the most deadly enemies the Ecitons have.

There are many other kinds of these ants: there is the small red Eciton which looks like a deep red-liquid flowing over the surface of all it attacks; and there is the blight Eciton, with the link connecting—the Eciton erassicornis which is only half blind, with small eyes sunk in deep sockets—a stout-limbed kind, and not in the smallest degree tamable—mollified by its misfortune. But they are all full of interest in their ways and works; and not the least so when they have laid aside their evil natures and frolic on the sunny ground like so many lambs, or kittens, or pretty little bull-headed puppies; leaping and dancing, and actually washing each other, with lessons in champaign superadded, wonderful to behold. Even the ant then understands the old adage of all work and no play, and is resolved that the Eciton Jack shall not be a dull boy for want of an occasional holiday.

Full of interest too, are the monkeys, these poor relations of ours sitting below the salt, as other ragamuffins have done before them, to the no great delight of the grandees under the dais. First we will speak of that prettiest little creature of all, the Midas; prettiest always, whether it is the Midas rosalia, the silky tamarine—one of the gentlest, most interesting, and most loving little creatures that ever set you wondering whether it was a monkey or a squirrel, or haply some bewitched negro baby, against which some cruel negro fairy had a spite. The little silver tamarine, Midas argentatus, is the most beautiful, as it is the rarest, of the species, and is kept as a choice treasure and most beloved pet when by chance found and taken alive; which is not very often, for the creature is by no means common, though sometimes to be seen gambolling like a little snow-white kitten among the branches of the forest trees. It is very small, only seven inches in length when full grown, and is covered with long white silky hairs, with a naked face flesh colored, and a blackish tail. It is playful, timid, sensitive, and affectionate; can be tamed by love, and for the love of one or two, but never becomes so tame as to be familiar with strangers; in fact, it is just like a timid little child, who knows and loves its nurses, but who shrinks back shyly from even the kindest friend. There are many kinds of Midas, and they are beautiful, and all gentle, and all playful; differing amongst each other only by the color of their coats and the size of their bodies, and whether naturalists have called them "lions," or "bears," or "silky," or "silvery." Very different are the ugly rusty-brown Couxins, with their queer hair caps, that look as if they had been just combed and brushed; and the Howlers of all hues, "making night hideous" with their dreadful cries; and odd, but not wholly unpleasant, scarlet-faced monkeys, dressed in long white coats, with faces of vivid scarlet, and grave and silent as so many judges. But the Parana, the bear-like speckled grey Pithecia hirsuta, is too affectionate and intelligent not to be a pet with all who can keep it alive; and the owl-faced night-ape, the Nyctipithecus, clothed in soft grey or brown fur, like rabbit-skin, and with a face like an owl or a tiger-cat, surrounded by ruff of whitish fur, is also a pet of the first order. It is a funny-looking little creature, very shy at the first, but to be tamed by kindness, when it becomes a source of great amusement—as, indeed, are all the smaller monkeys to those who like them. One, which Mr. Bates kept, used to hide itself in a wide mouthed glass jar when a stranger entered; but then he did not attempt the system of mere love and liberty adopted by the Brazilians, who make pets of even jaguars, which they suffer to run like puppies free among their children, and who tame their wild monkeys by always letting them sleep in their bosoms, or sit on their heads or shoulders. The little striped-faced Nyctipithecus which Mr. Bates kept as his vermin catcher in ordinary (this species soon clears a room of cockroaches and spiders, and even of bats), used to bark like a small dog at night—they are night creatures, as their name implies—scampering about the room after the spiders and cockroaches, which it ate with great gusto. It came finally to grief and dissolution through the jealousy of a Cairara monkey; not a pleasant pet by any means, being restless, jealous, discontented, and noisy, who, quarrelling with poor little owl-face over a fruit that had been given the latter, settled the business by cracking the little one's skull with his teeth—owl-face defending himself only by "clawing out and hissing like a cat," being a meek-minded being not given to fistfuffs.

One of the most extraordinary accidents that has been recorded for years took place at Prince's town, near the town of Tredegar, South Wales. A boy was passing along the road, when, as he was looking at a cottage, inhabited by a man named Evan Jenkins and his family, he thought he observed a movement of part of the masonry. On watching it more narrowly he was satisfied that the framework of the window was sinking, and being apprehensive that the foundation of the structure was giving way, he ran to the door and alarmed the inmates, who were seated round the table at breakfast. By this time the floor began to shake, and the terrified persons immediately ran into the road, and had scarcely done so when the house began to sink through the ground, and in a very short time was entirely out of sight, leaving the site upon which it had stood on open chasm, filled to within some yards of the road with earth and stones which had fallen in from the sides. It would seem that the ground upon which the cottage was raised stood over a disused colliery, and the earth must first have given way at a depth of fully a hundred feet below the surface. The escape of the family is looked upon as quite miraculous, as the whole of their furniture, and indeed everything contained in their humble dwelling, was carried into the chasm beneath. Under Providence they feel that they owe their lives to the sharp conduct of the boy.

THE FINAL HOUR.

Death is always before us. We can know nothing of it, but the little we gather from the sight of our eyes, the hearing of our ears, and the guesses of our intelligence; nothing, that is, unless through a Divine revelation. Those who understand it by their experience of it have passed beyond our reach; and we can learn nothing from them. And what they might tell us, if they could, might not be of any essential service, might not help us at all in our individual instances; so rarely are the cases and circumstances of any two of us alike. In truth, after all the feigned, assumed, and so-called intercourse with the spirits of the departed, we know nothing satisfactory of dying and of death, more than we did before. It remains, after ages of observation, and the experience of millions gone, to us the same dread mystery. Dost thou, O man, apprehend it near? Art thou in fear of it? Dost thou shrink from the grapple and conflict? Is it the darkness that appalleth thee? Is it the mystery that affrighteth thee? Dost thou dread the prospect of separation from thy body cause thee regret?

If not, why shouldst thou fear? Pains thou hast borne often. Perchance they have been far greater than any that shall attend thy exit from the world. Thou hast parted with friends for all this world before, and hast endured it well, and in going from them again can it be worse than a lifetime? Thou dost not know what shall be after death; and so thou darest not? Neither dost thou know what the morrow shall bring forth; it is wholly hidden from thee—dost thou therefore dread the morrow, and art thou afraid to lie down and slumber till it dawn?

No, it is not so much the pain of dying, nor the pain of separation from friends, nor the pain of existing as a spirit out of the body, nor the pain of leaving plans and labors unfinished, and hopes unrealized, that makes us so unwilling to enter the portals of the night. All these combined might render us anxious still to live; but none, nor all of them, can explain the dread we have of the immortal conflict. That dread is the result of sin. It is the evil of the heart, foreshadowing its doom. It is the warning angel. It is the vision prophetic.

We are looking always beyond the mere fact of death itself. We follow its consequences. We fear that we shall lose the good that here we have; and repeat the ill that here we have felt, even if we do not find them multiplied a thousand fold. Verily, saith the apostle—"The sting of death is sin." But for sin death were scarcely an enemy. In spite of sin, it may be hailed a friend! "Be not afraid," O man, "only believe!" Thy sins, which are many, may be forgiven thee! The victory thou mayest have before and in thy death—so that even the conqueror of thy physical being shall be vanquished, forbidden to touch thy immortal part, and forbidden to accuse thee of thy forgiven sins; and confessing that he has no farther domination than over the shaky tabernacle of thy dust.

It is repentance; it is forgiveness; it is righteousness, then, that are our friends in the hour of conflict; and it is our sins, and not death itself, that make death an enemy. These—peace, pardon, purity—all ye may have, through the Lord; and having these ye may fear no evil. The cheering word unto every soul is—"Be not afraid, only believe!"—E.E.

POLITICAL ASSASSINATIONS.

The Unita Cattolica gives the following list of all the attempts at political assassination that have been made since 1850:

The Queen of England: Queen Victoria can count four attempts on her life. On June 28, 1850, she received a violent blow with a stick from one Robert Pate, a retired Lieutenant of the 10th Hussars. The Kings of Prussia: In May, 1850, the late King of Prussia received, as he was mounting a railway carriage, a shot from a holster pistol of large bore in the forearm; the assassin, Seifeld, of Wetzelow, cried out as he fired, "Liberty for ever." The life of the present King of Prussia was in danger at Baden, on the morning of July 14, 1861. Two pistol shots were fired at him by Oscar Becker, a law student of Leipsic. The regicide declared that he wished to kill the King because he was not capable of effecting the unity of Germany. The Emperor of Austria: On February 18, 1853, at Vienna, Francis Joseph I. was struck with a knife in the nape of the neck. The murderer's name was Libenay, of Albe, in Hungary, aged 20, resident at Vienna, and a tailor by trade. The Duke of Parma: On March 20, 1854, Ferdinand Charles III., Duke of Parma, returning from an excursion, was hustled by an individual who at the same time stabbed him in the abdomen, left the point in the wound, and subsequently escaped. The Duke expired in cruel torture at the end of 23 hours. The Queen of Spain (a second attempt): On May 28, 1856, as Queen Isabella was passing in her carriage along the Rue de l'Arseuil at Madrid, a young man, named Raymond Fuentes, drew a pistol from his pocket, and would have discharged it at her head, had not his arm been caught, and his weapon taken from him by an agent of the police. The King of Naples: On December 8, 1856, whilst Ferdinand II. was reviewing his troops at Naples, a soldier, named Agnesir Milano struck him with his bayonet, and, at a later period, Garibaldi honored the memory of the regicide. Napoleon III.: In October, 1852, when Napoleon, who was on the eve of becoming Emperor, was at Marseilles, there had been prepared an infernal machine, formed by 250 gun barrels charged with 1500 balls, intended to go off all at once against the Prince and his cortege. But the attempt was not carried out. On July 5, 1853, a fresh attempt was made to assassinate him as he was going to the opera Comique. Twelve Frenchmen were arrested as concerned in the conspiracy. On April 28, 1855, Jean Liverani fired two shots at the Emperor in the Grand Avenue of the Champs Elysees. In 1857, Thibaldi, Bartolotti, and Grilli came from England to Paris to assassinate the Emperor, but were discovered, arrested, tried, and punished. On January 14, 1858, Orsini, Gomes, Pieri, and Rudio, threw their murderous shells at the Emperor of the French, and shed the blood of a great many honest citizens in Paris. On December 24, 1863, Greco, Trabucco, Imperatore, and Scaglioni, who had come over from London with the intention of killing the French Emperor, were arrested in Paris. The Queen of Greece, directing public affairs during the King's absence, was returning from a ride on horseback, when she was fired at without effect, near the Palace, by Aristide Donoso, a student, aged 19 years. Victor Emmanuel II.: In 1858, an attempt was made on the life of this sovereign, and Count Cavour gave an account of it in the sitting of April 16. President Lincoln: On April 14, 1865, at the Theatre of Washington, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States of America, was assassinated by Booth.

Die letzten Lebensmomente Moses.
(Eine Midrasch-Legende.)Von
S. H. Kalisch, Rabbiner.

Und Gott erschien in Feuerflammen.
Die Sonne glüht vor seinem Glanz, Die Erde glühend schreit auf, und Denn bei der Schauer erfüllt sie ganz.

Und tief die Wellen nach oben, Wie in den tiefsten Himmelsplan;
Und Engel stiegen in Lüften schwebend, Die dreimal heilig künden an.

Als Moses sah die Herrlichkeit Des Hohenpriesters, den sich nach'n, Begrüßte er sich vorübergehend Zum Wandel auf der Himmelsbahn.

Und betend fällt vor Gott er nieder.
Sei ewig, sprach er, gnädig mir!
Lass mich dein Antlitz schauen wieder, Wenn du mich tröstest in's Geheir.

D. Lieblich, schell's in mildesten Tönen, Soll dich der Seligkeit erfreuen, Und ewig nah bei meinem Throne Mit den Seraphim sein.

Denn fromm und edel war dein Leben, Wie kein's war auf der Erdenwelt.
Ich werde dich die Gnade geben, Und trag dich selbst zum Sternenzelt.

Wie von Mariaborn Morgengrößen Ein Strom des Lichtes sich ergießt, Und Paradiesflüsse weben Und Gottesdunst den Welten küßt.

Im Nu ward seine Geel, verkündet
Von ungeheurer Majestät, Ihr Glanz hat sich so sehr vermehrt, Daß sich ward zum Cherub erhöht.

Sie stieg mit Gott voll sel'ger Wonnen In's Allerheil'gste himmelan, Und übertrug ihm die Sonnen Im ganzen Weltencran.

Als Moses so war beimgangen Zum Unerlöschten in den Hohen, Da schwebte die Erde voller Wonnen, Und füllte die Luft mit Hallelan.

Und Sonne, Mond und all' die Sterne Erfüllten Schmerz und tiefer Gram, Und Alles trau'nte sich und fern, Daß Gott der Erd' den Moses nahm.

Do es erschall in höchsten Höhen:
Um Moses keine Klage erhob, Denn seine Leber wird befehen,
So lang' ein Mensch auf Erden lebt.

Es wird sein Name ewig glücken Und leuchten wie der Himmelsdorn, Denn sein Prophet wird je erlücken, Den so umfließt mein Weisheitsstrom.

Wehe dem, dessen Verteidiger zugleich sein Ankläger wird.*
Von
A. Tendler.

Ein alter Wegelagerer trieb sein räuberisches Gewerbe schon lange Zeit ungestört; lange schon lauerte er den Hin- und Herreisenden auf den We-gen auf, überfiel sie von seinem Hinterhalte aus und beraubte sie. Da kam eines Tages ein kö-niglicher Beamter des Weges. Er durchstreifte die Provinz um die Steuern zu erheben. Der Weglagerer überfiel ihn, warf ihn zu Boden und nahm ihm Alles ab, was er mit sich führte.

Nach einiger Zeit indes gelang es, den Räuber zu ergreifen und festzunehmen. Als der königliche Beamte das hörte, ging er zu demselben in's Gefängnis und sprach: „Komme, gib mir zurück, was jener Mann — Du weißt es ja — mir auf dem Wege abgenommen, und ich will ein gutes Wort für Dich einlegen.“

„Von all dem, was man Dir abgenommen hat,“ antwortete der Räuber, „besize ich nichts, nur diese Decke ist mir geblieben, die Dir gehört.“

„Gib sie mir,“ sagte der Beamte, „und ich werde für Dich vor dem König sprechen.“

Der Räuber gab sie ihm. „Geh,“ sprach der Beamte, „Morgen wirst Du vor Gericht geführt.
Der König wird Dich vorführen und Dich fragen, ob Du einen Menschen hast, der für Dich ein Wort einlegen kann, verurtheile Dich dann auf mich, und so wird der König mich kommen lassen.“

Es geschah so den anderen Tag, der Räuber wurde vor's Gericht gebracht, der König richtete die Frage an ihn und er berief sich auf den königlichen Beamten.

„Kennst Du diesen Mann?“ sprach der König zu dem Beamten, als derselbe auf seinen Ruf erschienen war, „und weißt Du etwas zu seinen Gun-sten zu sagen?“

„Ich kenne ihn wohl,“ antwortete der Beamte.
„Als Du mich ausfindigst, die Steuern der Provinz zu erheben, ward ich von ihm überfallen und aller Habe, die ich mit mir führte, beraubt; es geschah ohne einen Zeugen, und dennoch hat er mir diese Decke zurückgegeben.“

„Wehe dem, rief da Alles, dessen Verteidiger zugleich sein Ankläger wird!“ „und wehe,“ fuhr Schriftgelehrter R. Levi, der dieses Gleichniß seinen Schülern erzählte, „wehe dem,“ fuhr er fort, „der von unrechtem Gute Gott ein Opfer bringen will!
der etwa das Lulab, das er gestohlen, zum Fest-braut nimmt und vor Gott hin und her benezt, eher der auf der einen Seite den Armen, die Witwe und die Waise betrückt und verkürzt und auf der anderen Seite mit seiner scheinbar köstlichen Frömmigkeit groß thut! Da flagt der Gegenstand seiner Frömmigkeit selbst ihn an vor Gott und spricht: „Ich bin gestohlenes, geraubtes Gut!“
und die Engel des Himmels rufen: „Wehe dem, dessen Verteidiger zugleich sein Ankläger wird!“
— „Jerusalem.“

Affenstüd aus der Französischen Revolution die Emanzipation der Juden betreffend

(Fortsetzung.)

Soll man ihnen den Handel nicht ganz verbie-ten? Das sei ferne! Das hieße sie vollends zu Grunde richten, da dies für's erste das einzige Mit-tel ist, woron sie sich erhalten. — Soll man sie in die Kaufmannsgilden aufnehmen? Diese Frage, über die in verschiedenen Tribunalen heftig gestrit-ten worden, wurde bald entschieden worden sein, wenn man die Vernunft und die Menschlichkeit zu Rathe gezogen hätte. Die Vernunft würde für sie die Erhaltung gefordert haben, die Mensch-lichkeit ihre Schutzherrin geworden sein. Siwürde die Unterwerfung der Juden, ihre Ergeblichkeit im Unglück, ihre Thätigkeit, ihre Gedul-dhaftigkeit und Sparsamkeit angeführt haben.
Und wirklich in den letzten Eigenschaften kommen sie den Arabern gleich; sie übertreffen letztere aber in der Geschicklichkeit und in der Kunst, von den Umständen Nutzen zu ziehen. In Frankreich sind verschiedene Handelszweige theils ganz eingegangen, theils im Abnehmen, und man hilft dem Mangel, den Faulheit oder Unerfahrenheit verur-sacht, dadurch ab, daß man fremde Erzeugnisse einführt. Für die Juden waren dies wahre Goldgruben, die sie mit ihren für alle einträgliche In-dustrie empfänglichen Geist sehr gut zu benut-zen wußten.

Außer dem Vortheil, daß sie Beschäftigung und Nahrungsmittel erlangten, würden sie durch die kleinste Aufmunterung von Seiten der Regierung bald den Preis der aus dem Auslande eingeführten Waaren heruntersetzen und dadurch die Ausfuhr des baaren Geldes aus dem Lande vermindern.

Bei uns sieht man wenig jüdische Handwerker und Künstler, aber wahrlich nicht aus Unfähigkeit.
Im Stempelschneiden haben sie geschickte Meister hervorgebracht, und in Preußen zeichnet sich jetzt der berühmte Medailleur Abrahamson aus. In Asien sind sie Färber und Seidenarbeiter; in Morocco und auf den Küsten Afrika's, wo der Handel nicht sehr lebhaft ist, treiben sie Handwerke. Laßt erst den Juden frei, mit dem Christen gleichgeschit-telt sein, und in der Werkstätte ruhig arbeiten können, so wird schon ein Wettstreit entstehen, durch welchen die Künste verbessert, der Kunstfleiß gewekt und ein so niedriger Preis erhalten werden wird, der den Absatz in der Fremde sicher stellt.

Man erlaube nicht darüber, der Jude soll auch Sollat werden. In Paris und Preußen haben sie sich zur Bürgermiliz eifrig gedrängt, und weniger den Rang eines Hauptmanns erhalten. Ihre Belagerung am Sabbath zu manduciren wird auch nicht lange dauern. Im Talmut sowohl wie im Waimonides, dem Alter unter ihren Rabbinen, sind sich Stellen, die es erlauben.* In der Berliner Zeitung wurde auch einmal das Gewissen der in kaiserliche Dienste getretenen Juden darüber beruhigt. (Vermuthlich ist hier die Rede eines Rabbiners in Prag gemeint, die er den jüdischen Enrollirten hielt.) Leute von Vorurtheilen trauen ihnen keinen hohen Grad von Tapferkeit zu, sehen sie mit feigen Sklaven in einen Rang, unter welchen man kaum einen Spartacus finden würde. Sollte aber diese unter den Hasidimern so kriegerische Nation, die, vom Pompejus besiegt, sich ihres Sie-gers Achtung erwarb, die im Kriege gegen Mithridates den Sieg für die römischen Legionen ent-schied, die im sechsten Jahrhundert Neapel gegen Belzar verteidigte, und im jehnten den Christen half, die Räuberbanden zu vertreiben, welche Bö-gen verheerten; die im Jahre 1346 sich in Burgos verkauften und Heinrich von Transtamar, den Mörder seines rechtmäßigen Herrn widerstand; die Nation, welche an Portugal einen geschickten Feldbern und an England einen großen Seebelen überließ; die sich im letzten Jahrhundert bei der Belagerung von Vuda und Prag so ausgezeichnet vertheidigte; die bei dem Angriff auf Port Mahon eine glänzende Rolle spielte — sollte diese Nation nicht würdig sein, den französischen Fahnen zu folgen?

Sollen sie Landbauer werden? Darauf wollte ich schon kommen. Nach der einschicklichen Bemerkung eines Fleury war nie ein Volk mit dem Ackerbau mehr beschäftigt als die Israeliten in Palästina. Die Möglichkeit, sie zu ihrer ursprünglichen Beschäftigung wieder zurückzubringen, erhebt aus Thatsachen. Obere Europa zu verlassen, finden wir in Litthauen Juden, die ihre Felder selbst bebauen. Lassen sie das bei uns auch thun; mögen sie das Erdbreich mit Schweiß tränken, das vielleicht mit dem Blute ihrer Vorfahren gedüngt ist. Christliche Knechte können anfänglich mit den Juden arbeiten. Nach und nach wird der Nutzen ihn reizen; sein gelentiger Arm wird durch Uebung stärker werden und dieser bloß physische Vortheil wird seinen noch weit wichtigeren für die Moralität zur Folge haben. Denn immer wird der erste Stand der Menschen der erste an Sittlich-keit bleiben.

Aus diesem System folgt, daß dem Juden er-laubt sein müsse, sich anzukaufen; denn niemals wird ein Grundstück besser angebaut als von der Hand des Eigenthümers. Die Freiheit, welche Selbstens Felsen fruchtbar macht, wird ihnen Se-gen auch Geldern nicht versagen, die freie Hände bearbeiten. Das Recht, Grundstücke zu erwerben, wird den Juden an seinen Ort und sein Vaterland festhalten, und mit Vermeidung der Käufer werden auch die liegenden Gründe im Preise steigen.

Die Juden von Nancy verlangen den Zutritt zu unseren Schulen und Universitäten und die Aussicht auf Schulämter. Warum sollten wir ihnen auch die Thüren unseres Lyceums und unserer ge-lehrten Gesellschaften verschließen? Die Akademie der Wissenschaften nahm einen Neger unter die Zahl ihrer Correspondenten auf und erwarb sich dadurch Ehre. Man lasse die israelitische Jugend an der Erziehung der verschiedenen gesellschaftlichen Stände theilnehmen, so werden vernünftige Lehrer, die ohne Parteilichkeit christliche und jüdische Jünglinge lieben, gegenseitige Herzlichkeit her-vorbilden, wodurch den Ausbrüchen des Hasses vorgebeugt wird. Der erregte Wettstreit wird das letzte entwickeln, welchen die öffentliche Stimme die Ehrenpreise nicht versagen kann. Die jüdische Nation ist zu Allem tauglich; das beweisen die berühmten Schriftsteller, welche sie aufzuzeigen hat.
Sie verlor vor einigen Jahren einen Mann von großem Geiste, an dessen Stelle Bloch, Herz, Ding und andere jüdische Schriftsteller treten und ehren-volle Plätze einnehmen werden.

(Fortsetzung folgt.)

Berlin, 30. April. — Die hiesige Gemeinde, im Jahre 1671 begründet, gelangte erst in den ersten Decennien des vorigen Jahrhunderts zu ihrer eigentlichen Constitution. Ihre religiösen Beziehungen, als der der Kränzenverpflanzung, der für den Frühgottesdienst, die Gedächtnisfeier des ersten Jünglings das 150ste Jubiläum ihrer Stiftung; ebenfalls wurde erst kurz vor der Neujahrsfeier 5475 (September 1714) die alte Synagoge in der Heidenstraße, bis auf den heutigen Tag die Haupt-synagoge genannt — eingeweiht. Es erscheint nicht unangenehm, bei diesen gegenwärtig lebhaft hervortretenden Erinnerungen aus einer denkwürdigen Ereignisse aus jener alten Zeit Erwäh-nung zu thun. Am 18. April 1714, — am ersten Jahrestag des glorreichen Dimppler Sturmes (18. April h. a.) — vor 150 Jahren empfing genannte Synagoge den Besuch des damaligen Königs von Preußen, Friedrich Wilhelm I.
Derselbe erschien am 18. April 1714 (1715) in der Synagoge während des Morgengottesdienstes, begleitet von den Ministern, dem Hofstaat und den damals erst 3 Jahre alten Kronprinzen, dem nachmaligen König Friedrich dem Großen. Der König erkundigte sich genau nach allen Einzelheiten, zeigte sich überall befreundet und verlangte es ausdrücklich, daß die zum Gebet Versammelten vor ihm ebenso wie vor Gott „bedeckten Hauptes“ ste-hen möchten! — Der Geist des späteren großen Monarchen, in diesen Staaten „Jeder nach seiner (eigenen) Fassung“ folgen sollte, war schon damals in einer Zeit, wo ein Eisenmenger seinen Groll gegen das Judentum eben ausschüt-tete, erschaffen, — das Wort des königlichen Ba-lers vom Geiste des Judentums, die Synagoge begleitenden kleinen Sohnes getragen.
König Friedrich Wilhelm I. schenkte aus Veran-lassung dieses Besuchs der Synagoge einen prachtvollen Vorhang für die heilige Lade, denselben, welcher noch gegenwärtig am Feste der Festfreude und bei patriotischen Feiern die heilige Stelle einnimmt. — „J.“

Leipzig, im Februar. — Der hiesige, am 11. März 1859 gegründete Verein zur Förderung der jüdischen Gemeinde im Judenthume, hat in der jüngsten Zeit seine Thätigkeit zu entfalten be-gonnen und ein beträchtliches, zur Benutzung täglich geöffnetes Vereinslokal erworben. In diesem Lokale liegen nun zur Benutzung der Mitglieder, die mei-stens aus germanisirten Polen bestehen, eine Anzahl beträchtlicher Journale auf: Samagid, Samu-wasser, Kanaker, ferner der Jazacki, Jeshurun von Rabb. Hirsch, die Allgemeine Zeitung des Judenthums, Jüdisches Volksblatt, Frankel's Mo-natschrift, Ben Chananja, und endlich eine Anzahl wissenschaftlicher und belletristischer Blätter.
Am 24. vergangen Monats beging der Verein im Vereinslokal die Feier des Geburtsfestes Ves-sing's, bei welcher Gelegenheit der Herr Dr. Goldschmidt vor einer sehr zahlreichen Zuhörerschaft eine sehr begeisterte Rede über die Bedeutung des „Mithras“ hielt.

Aus Warschau vernimmt man von einem Gesellschaftsbesuche, der in Polen von weitverbreiteter Folge werden dürfte. Derselben zufolge sollen alle Aemter im Königreich Polen in Zukunft den Juden zugänglich werden. Nur ein Mitglied des Königlichen Administrationsrathes, der als Judensind bekannt, Rothschütz hat dagegen geäußert.
Es leidet keinem Zweifel, daß dieses Ge-heimniß in Kraft treten werde. Wenn man bedenkt, welchen großen Bruchtheil der Bevölkerung die Juden in Polen ausmachen und zugleich ihre praktische Thätigkeit in Erwägung zieht, so ist darauf zu rechnen, daß in nicht gar langer Zeit ein großer Theil der Aemter sich in den Händen von Juden befinden wird, d. h. n. Gewissenshaftigkeit, Unbestechlichkeit und Fleiß dem Lande sicherlich zum Segen gereichen wird.

Hannover im Mai. — Wie wir dem „Han-noverschen Tageblatt“ entnehmen, geht man damit um, einer neuen Anlage vor dem Thore, dem jetzt abgetragenen Kanonenwall, Herrn Ober Com-merzienrath Israel Simon zu Ehren, den Namen Simon's Allee“ beizulegen, da die Stadt diesen neuen Schmuck hauptsächlich ihm zu verdanken habe. — Herr Ober-Commerzienrath Simon, Firma Gebrüder Simon, ist ebenso hervorragend durch Frömmigkeit, Wohlthätigkeit und gemein-nützigen Eifer wie durch seinen Reichthum, den er in edelster Weise verwendet. — („J.“)

London. — In Süß haben sehr beunruhigende Gerüchte gegen unsere Glaubensgenossen von Seiten der dortigen Bevölkerung stattgefunden.
Sir Moses Montefiore, der sofort hiervon in Kennt-nis gesetzt wurde, jagerte nicht mit seinem Entschlusse, persönlich durch eine Reise nach Persien für die dortigen Verhältnisse der Juden seine wirksame Thätigkeit zu entfalten. Lord Palmerston und die übrigen Mitglieder des Ministeriums glaubten es nicht zugeben zu dürfen, daß dieser er-wähnte Wandel in so vorgerücktem Greisenalter ohne Schonung seiner Gesundheit solcher Strapazen sich unterzöge. Sie versprachen ihm, ihren ganzen Einfluß dafür zu verwenden, daß die ge-hörte Kunde in der befriedigenden Weise wieder begründet werde, und steht somit hoffentlich bald eine bessere Regelung der Verhältnisse unserer dortigen Brüder in Aussicht. — („J.“)

Frankfurt a. M. — Bei den jüngsten Wahlen zum Colleg der ständigen Bürgerrepräsentation wurden unter Andern auch zwei Israe-liten (die einen, die jemals in das Colleg gelang-ten) gewählt. Es sind dies die Herren Rütten und Dr. Neutich.

Leipzig. — „Josi Anochi“ ist der Name einer hier seit Kurzem erschienenen jüdischen Zei-tschrift unter der Redaktion des Herrn Baruch Werber aus Breslau.

A SECOND SAM PATCH.—Last week a sailor took a leap from the centre of the cast-iron bridge at Sunderland, England, which is one hundred feet above the water. The man applied to the magistrates previously for permission to perform the exploit, but their worship refused to countenance it. Afterwards, however, bills were issued announcing that "Stephen Jeffrey, the great English diver, from the Isle of Wight," would, at twenty minutes past three o'clock on Wednesday, make the "extraordinary and daring leap" from the centre of the very side of the bridge. Police were posted on the bridge at the hour appointed, but the man, dressed as a sailor, passed through the crowd without being recognized. About half-past 3 o'clock he suddenly threw off his coat, gave it into the hands of a friend, and then mounting the rails, quickly leaped down head foremost to the river. Despite the strong wind blowing at the time he seemed to go down in almost a straight course; but before reaching the water gathered himself up and made a plunge, hands over head, in the orthodox diving fashion. He rose to the surface almost immediately, and then coolly swam after and picked up an orange which he took out of his breast and threw over just before taking his leap. He then turned to swim ashore to one of the landings, but a cobbler manned by two river police rowed up and took him on board. He was landed at the Pannas Ferry Landing, and walked ashore passing through an immense crowd of people, who greeted him with loud cheers. It is stated that the man has often undertaken daring leaps before, and that he will next visit Newcastle and take a leap from the High Level Bridge.—Newcastle Chronicle.

Die Oper in der Academy of Music.

Gounod's Oper „Faust," welche so Erogema- fchend in die neue Opernliteratur eingegriffen und mit so großem Erfolge sich auf allen größeren Bühnen Europa's behauptet hat, wurde in diesem Gounod Montag zum ersten Male gegeben und am Mittwoch wiederholt. Die zweite Aufführung ging viel abgerundeter als die erste, obgleich auch hier noch manche Unbequemlichkeiten sich geltend machten und die großen, von den tiefsten musikalischen Verhältnissen gebotenen röhren Striche auch nicht geeignet waren, dem Werke größeres Verdict zu verschaffen.

Die „Margarethe" der Signorina Scrocia, wenn auch nicht im höchsten Grade gedacht und durchgeführt, war doch eine recht brave Leistung und wurde von der Dame durchaus feiner Vor- wurf daraus machen, daß sie von dem tiefen, reichen Gemüthsleben und der feinen offnen Eingebung eines deutschen Gretchen keine Vorstellung hat; man muß die Dichtung im Originalen gelesen und eine Marie Teubach als Gretchen gesehen haben, um die Großartigkeit dieser Rolle zu verstehen. Daß Signor Morelli den Werthe ausgezeichnet fand und nach seiner Auffassung auch im Spiel consequent durchführte, ist bei diesem Künstler selbstverständlich; doch können wir uns keineswegs mit seiner Auffassung des Charakters einverstanden erklären. Werthe ist boshafte, mit der beifsten Ironie macht er jede edle menschliche Regung lächerlich und hat seine größte Freude daran, die Lächerlichkeit zum Falle zu bringen, er ist wahrhaft teuflisch, aber großartig in seiner Teufelrei und darf deshalb nicht in das Komische hinabgezogen werden, was Sig. Scrocia muß über die Natur des Faust noch richtig nachdenken.

Von dem Augenblicke an, wo Werthe ihn den Lebenstraum reißt und der Vergängnisprozess vorgegangen ist, wechselt Faust mit den Kleidern aus dem ganzen Menschen; er ist nun plötzlich mit seltener Jugendkraft ausgestattet und von aufrichtiger glühender Leidenschaft für Margarethe erfüllt, bis zu dem Momente, wo nach getriebener Schmach die allmähliche Entfaltung der Gefühle eintritt, die nur zum Schluß in der Sterkerfeste durch den Blick des großen Elends seiner Geliebten für einen Augenblick wieder neue Nahrung erhalten. Sig. Scrocia's Darstellung fehlte diese Fäkt und Schattenfalten gänzlich. Er gab den Faust vom Anfange bis zum Ende mit gleicher Ruhe und Gemessenheit.

Daß derselbe sehr schön gefungen verdient um so größere Anerkennung, als die Partie dem Umfange seiner Stimme durchaus nicht günstig liegt. Wils Phillips und Sig. Orlandini als Siebel und Valentin, machten aus ihren kleinen Rollen das Beste.

Wohlbekanntes Lob und volle Anerkennung verdient dem Orchesterpersonal, das unter der tüchtigen Leitung des Herrn Reiff seine diesmal sehr schwierige Aufgabe glänzend gelöst hat.

Wir machen das Publikum und besonders die Kaufleute vom Lande auf die Anzeige der Herrn Feldmann & Co., Importeure und Händler von Gold- und Silberwaaren, Nos. 211 & 213 Californiastraße, ganz besonders aufmerksam.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.

BY AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY of the Treasury, the Undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three-tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date June 15th, 1865, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible, at the option of the holder, into

U. S. 5-20 SIX PER CENT.

GOLD BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are now worth a premium of nine per cent. including gold interest from November, which makes the actual profit on the 7-30 loan at current rates, including interest, about ten per cent. per annum, besides its EXEMPTION FROM STATE AND MUNICIPAL TAXATION, WHICH ADDS FROM ONE TO THREE PER CENT. MORE, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable in currency, semi-annually, by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to One cent per day on a $50 note.
Two cents " " $100 "
Ten cents " " $500 " Twenty cents " " $1,000 "
One Dollar " " $5,000 "

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions.
This is

THE ONLY LOAN IN MARKET

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantages will make it the GREAT POPULAR LOAN OF THE PEOPLE.

Less than $300,000,000 of the loan authorized by the last Congress, are now on the market.

This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within four months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Bank, State Banks, and private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscriptions at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

Singer Sewing Machines,

Secured by 17 Distinct Patents,
THE SINGER MANUFACTURING CO., 139 MONTGOMERY STREET, SAN FRANCISCO.

THE SINGER "LETTER A TRANSVERSE SHUTTLE" Family Sewing Machine, with all the new improvements, is the best and cheapest, and most beautiful of all Sewing Machines.

This Machine will sew anything from the stitching of a tuck in tulle, to the making of an overcoat.
There is no machine known which can do so many kinds of work as the LETTER A MACHINE. Let it be tested with the finest thread (say No. 200 cotton) and with the coarsest thread and with all intermediate kinds, and also with both fine and coarse flax thread, upon light, medium and heavy fabrics, and then apply the same tests to other machines, and the greater capacity of the SINGER MACHINE will soon be discovered.

No other Family Sewing Machine has such perfect and improved appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Sewing, Braiding, Embroidery, Cording, Quilting, etc.

THE LETTER A SEWING MACHINE will gather ruffling while stitching it upon a hand, in one operation and much more perfectly than other machines.

Stitches! Stitches!

The Letter A Machine makes the INTERLOCKED STITCH, which is the best known, and which alone is recognized by Tailors or Manufacturers of Wearing Apparel of every kind, because of its great STRENGTH, ELASTICITY, DURABILITY, and above all, its ECONOMY, it requiring only one third the amount of thread consumed by Machines making the very extravagant and clumsy knitting or double lock stitch, which has been so widely pushed of late, but which in truth is a force upon the economy of Sewing Machines.

Any person, even of the most ordinary capacity, can see at a glance how to use the Letter A Machine. The mechanism is entirely within view, thus relieving the operator of the harassing perplexities and annoyances so common with machines constructed otherwise. Plain printed instructions accompany each Machine, from which purchasers can easily learn to operate successfully.

Among the great variety of cabinet cases in which the Letter A Machine can be had, the latest and most useful is what is known as the Folding Top Case.

Which is made exclusively for the Singer Machines, and embodies three very important things. First, Protection to the Machine when not in use. Second—It makes a fine cabinet when it is in use for the work to rest upon. Third—The whole case enclosing its treasure of mechanism, is not only ornamental, but useful in the highest degree.

The Singer Standard or Manufacturing Machine.

For Boot and Shoe-making, Tailoring, Stay-making, Cap-making, Army Clothing, Harness-making, Carriage Trimming, etc. This is the only machine that has ever been successfully introduced for manufacturing purposes.

It is certain in action at all rates of speed, simple in structure, of great strength and durability, of great rapidity of operation, and will do more work with less labor than any other Manufacturing Machine claiming public attention.
It does its work well at rapid as well as at slow rates of speed. It will last longer than any other machine in the market in the finest possible working order, seldom if ever requiring to be repaired. That it will earn more money than any other machine is a fact being generally understood by the public. No Tailor or Manufacturer of Clothing can work to advantage without this Machine.

All persons requiring information about Sewing Machines, their Sizes, Prices, Working Capacities, and the Best Method of Purchasing.

Can obtain it by sending for a copy of the Singer Manufacturing Companies

ILLUSTRATED PAMPHLET,

Which is entirely devoted to the subject. It will be sent gratis, with specimens of work.

F. KESMODEL'S
IMPROVED
Patent Trusses,

The undersigned having experimented for the last six years for the improving of TRUSSES, desires to call the attention of those in need of a reliable instrument to the following results obtained:

The most important part of a Truss consists in the pad being of a shape which, when pressure is applied will not check circulation of the blood. This is obtained by taking an accurate impression on the parts of each individual.

The pad is then made after the above model, of thin silver and being perforated over the whole surface, allows free ventilation and gives the parts a chance to recuperate.

The pad being adjusted to the spring with ball and socket-joints, allows free motion of the body without altering the bearing of the pad.

I have also invented a spring with an adjustable joint, whereby the pressure can at any moment be increased or diminished.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF AWARDS ON California Brandy, Cordials and Bitters; held September 28th, 1884.

First Premium Awarded to Squarza for Punches.

First Premium for Cordials.

First Premium for Squarza's Hygienic Bitters.

The Committee think this is a fit occasion not only to award to true merit, and stamp with verity as article (or articles) worthy of public confidence and patronage, but also to put their seal of commendation upon VILLAINOUS COMPOUNDS, BASE IMITATIONS AND WORTHLESS CONFESSIONS, which resemble the genuine only in their names.

Squarza's Punches, Cordials and Bitters, on exhibition, declared them to be composed of the best material, and that the same were manufactured with science and utmost care.

The Committee, in their deliberation, had to rely entirely upon the numbers on the bottles; knowing nothing of the authors of either samples submitted to their examination, but were unanimous in their approval of the one, and the condemnation of the other.

Respectfully submitted,
DR. L. J. OWEN, Professor of Chemistry, FRANCIS C. BELDEN, Committee.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The public are very vacillating in their attendance at the operatic performances. Some evenings there is a paying audience present, while at other times the number is very sparse and scanty. To-night, "La Favorita" will be given; to-morrow, "Martha" is announced. Both of these operas are favorites in this community, and have never yet failed to attract good houses. It is to be hoped that those of our city who appreciate the luxury of these rich performances, will make some effort to support in a becoming manner the enterprising management and talented company.

EUREKA THEATRE.—"The Colleen Bawn" is having quite a run at this unique little house; and well it may, for it is beautifully rendered. Mrs. Fanny Morgan Phelps is irresistibly winning as "Anne Chute," and is deserving of the compliments bestowed on her. "Jeff Davis in Hoops" is exceedingly humorous, and keeps the entire house convulsed with laughter. The principal characters are sustained by Mrs. Judah and Mr. Wheatleigh. The entertainment concludes with the singing in a spirited manner of the "Battle Cry of Freedom," in which the full company take part, together with an apotheosis of Abraham Lincoln, the whole forming a most pleasing and effective tableau.

OPERA HOUSE.—"The Romance of a Poor Young Man" forms the bill for this evening. Several new pieces are under rehearsal.

A HINT TO HOUSEKEEPERS.—Go to headquarters, and you are sure to obtain the best article at the lowest price. The importing house of Newman Bros. have every conceivable article of household use and requirement, which are sold at a slight advance on the original wholesale price. Remember the establishment, 406 and 408 Battery street.

A WOLF HUNT IN FRANCE.—The Courier de l'Eure gives an account of a wolf hunt, with the dog dogs of the Comte de Nebois, who went out accompanied by his two sons. The dogs started a splendid she wolf, and the hunt lasted three hours across the woods and alleys of Canaperville and Vernon. The wolf finally darted into the great wood of d'Acquigny, and having vainly tried to climb up the park wall of M. Merle's property, she finally turned to bay against an out-house at the village of Haye-le-Comte, showing a formidable row of huge teeth and howling with rage. The inhabitants of the village rushed out of their houses, calling out, "An secours." The sons of the Count rode up armed with their long hunting knives. M. Paul de Nebois thrust the blade of his down the throat of the wolf, who managed to turn the weapon and close with its powerful jaws on the hand of the intrepid hunter, who was in imminent danger. Happily his brother, M. Albert de Nebois, struck the wolf to the heart, and thus rescued his brother. The animal weighed eighty pounds.

DR. HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS!

The operation of this palatable remedy upon the stomach, liver and excretory organs is singularly soothing and conservative. It regulates, recruits and purifies them. Dyspepsia in all its forms yields to its control and invigorating properties.

Invigorate the System.

Vigorous digestion and pure bile produce nutritious blood, and nutritious blood a healthy frame. Does the victim of a dyspeptic stomach and a disordered liver desire to know how the digestion may be improved, the bile and other fluids of the body purified?

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Will accomplish this desirable revolution in the system, regulating the secretions and excretions, giving tone to the animal juices which dissolve the food, strengthen every relaxed nerve, muscle and fibre, and brings the whole machinery of vitality into vigorous and healthy play.

Strengthen the System.

The best means of imparting vigor to the broken-down frame and shattered constitution, which has yet been invented or discovered, is proffered to the feeble of both sexes and all ages in

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Debility from whatever cause arising, may be cured; strength, in whatever manner it may have been wasted may be restored by the use of this powerful and healthful invigorant. For indigestion and all its painful effects, bodily and mental, they are a positive specific.

A Word to the Aged.

In the decline of life the loss of vital force consequent upon physical decay can only be safely supplied by some vivifying preparation which recruits the strength and spirits without entailing the exhaustion which is always the final effect of ordinary stimulants. We tender to the aged

Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters,

As an invigorant and restorative, immediate in its beneficial action and permanent in its effects. It tones the stomach, improves the appetite, and acts like a charm upon the spirits.

For Females.

Thousands of females resort to it as a remedy for hysteria, fluttering of the heart, nervous headache, vertigo, general debility, and all the peculiar disturbances and derangement to which, as a sex, they are subject. It cheers and enlightens the depressed mental powers, as well as strengthens the body, and its use is never followed by any reaction.

THE FIFTH INDUSTRIAL FAIR,

OF THE
Mechanics' Institute, OF SAN FRANCISCO

TO BE HELD IN AUGUST, 1865.

THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE HAVING determined to hold their Fifth Industrial Fair during the coming season, the Executive Committee would respectfully invite all persons desirous of exhibiting Machines, Manufactures, Agricultural Implements, Horticultural Products, Minerals, Ores and Works of Art, to make application immediately, in order that the proper space may be allotted them. The Exhibition will be opened to the public on THURSDAY, the Tenth day of August, at 10 o'clock A. M.

The Pavilion will be open for the reception of goods from the 15th of July to the 24 of August. Fruits, Flowers, Agricultural and Horticultural productions will be received until the day of opening. The several transportation companies, as on former occasions, have, with commendable liberality, consented to transport articles intended exclusively for exhibition, free of charge, and Messrs. Wells, Fargo & Co., in like manner, will take charge of them. All articles forwarded should be labeled, "For the Industrial Fair," San Francisco. All communications to be addressed to C. S. GRAND

CELEBRATION.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, THAT THE coming Anniversary of Independence Day will be celebrated by the citizens of San Francisco in a manner that shall testify their solemn joy for a nation born, a nation saved, and an oppressed race set free.
Never again will this generation witness a day so worthy of jubilee.
As a part of the ceremonies of the occasion, there will be a GRAND PROCESSION, and all Military Organizations and Civic Societies of this City and adjoining Counties, will be especially invited to join in it. Formal invitations will be appropriately addressed as soon as the same can be prepared.
je16 C. L. TAYLOR, Grand Marshal.
